INDIA'S FIRST PRIVACY CARD GAME

Ishita Begani

THIS GAME IS DESIGNED BY ISHITA BEGANI AND EVANGELISED BY THE INTERNET FREEDOM FOUNDATION

"Powerplay is a card game designed to build awareness about privacy among the citizens of India. The aim of the game is to maintain the balance between your character's public and private data when the government infringes upon your privacy. It engages the players in privacy-themed contexts and allows them to play their data according to an event in the game. It creates an understanding of the innumerable ways our data is vulnerable to abuse by unknown forces including our government. The citizens also become aware of how the bill challenges our basic notions of privacy. It is an approach to make people realize their 'Right to Privacy' under Article 21 of the Constitution and address the widespread problem of low awareness about data privacy in general."

WHY SHOULD YOU CONSIDER BECOMING AN IFF VISIONARY?

At Internet Freedom Foundation, we work to protect your constitutional rights in today's digital society.

Your donations fund our strategic litigation, public advocacy, consultations with public authorities, salaries, and operation costs.

Because of this, we are able to do critical work in the spheres of privacy, surveillance technology, internet access, digital security and literacy, innovation, and more.

We are for community, by community. Your collaboration is a crucial part of our mission, and we need your support!
